with the end of Mrs. Thaw's testimony came an accomment until Friday because of the death of a relative of Justice Fitzgerald. All the evidence that will be offered to save Thaw from the electric chair, except the opinion of two experts as to the sanity on the night he killed Stanford White, is now in.

Reluctant to Leave Stand.

When Mr. Delmas had deftly limited her examination to the change she had noted in her son's condition following his return from Paris in 1906, after Evelyn Nesbit had told him her life story, and when District Attorney Jerome had, with great consideration, conducted a short and ineffectual cross-examination, the mother love welled strong in Mrs. Thaw, and she felt she had not done her all. She was loath to leave the witness chair.

"There is the question of heredity," she protested when both Mr. Delmas and the plane playing proposed in the intervention of the drawing room and resume playing in the same way, first wildly and then softer and softer.

"But the most marked feature was his wakefulness at night. His room was next to mine and I would hear his obbing. I would see a light under the door at 3 or 4 in the morning. RUSSIAN GENERAL ESCAPES SERIOUS HURTS FROM BOMB

ST. PETERSBURG, March 7 .- Attacked for the second time within a year by a bomb thrower, General Neplueff, commandant of the Fortress at Sebastopol, had a marvelous escape Sebastopol, had a marvelous escape from death. The missile was hurled while Neplueff, who has been transferred for duty at a less hazardous post was driving through the city to attend a farewell banquet given in his honor. The carriage was shattered and the general was injured about the feet. His coachman was wounded and a woman who was passing sustained serious injuries.

dall Thaw's white-haired mother took the stand yesterday afternoon, and did her part in the battle to save the life of the slayer of Stanford White.

Mother Breaks Down.

Twice during her recital of the events which had caused her to fear that all was not right with her son, Mrs. Thaw broke into tears and was unable to proceed. Her face flushed, and she made an effort to speak, but the words would not come.

After a few moments Justice Fitzgerald asked solicitously if she felt able to proceed, and Mrs. Thaw, evidently much charactered that have been solved to be a speak to the words would that ruin your life? but he insisted it had. an effort once more to proceed, but falled.

Justice Fitzgerald then interposed a relief for which the elderly woman facing him must have been deeply grateful. He said that as many of the witness' remarks had been uttered in a very low voice, it would be necessary to have the stenographer read the testimony to the jury. By the time this was done, Mrs. Thaw had regained her selfcontrol.

In the middle of Mrs. Thaw's testimony came the question of a lunacy commission for Thaw, the first time it has been spoken of in court, and it ended by Mr. Jerome saying he was not asking such a step.

When Mrs. Thaw Greeted Her Son.

They have watched him closely every day in the courtroom. In this way, through the different corps of experts, a distinct line has been drawn for the period of Thaw's alleged insanity during which he shot White.

Lines Cleverly Drawn.

This same drawing a line of distinction was carefully observed by Drs. Evans and Wagner in their testimony. On the visits they made they found Thaw apparently insane. At succeeding visits they noted progress. Then they were withdrawn.

With the abundant means at their command the defense could employ a different set of experts to take up the case there.

one of the few night sessions ever held in this Commonwealth. At the time of adjournment, upward of 60 men were herded into the little court room, whose walls rang out with the eloquent appeal of Capt. Micajah Woods for the upholding of the majesty of the law. On the outside stood a hundred more men, who clamored for admission, but were refused by Sheriff Pulliam. Captain Woods' address was conceded to be the best heard during the progress of the trial. He was on his feet addressing the jury almost four hours, and seemed able to continue longer.

When he concluded the closing argument for the State, Judge Harrison told the jury he appreciated the fact that they had been sitting patiently since 9:30 o'clock yesterday merning, and asked if they wanted to relire to the jury room immediately, or wait until Thursday morning. The jurors preferred to denberate on the case Thursday morning. Slowly and reluctantly the herd of humanity left the old temple of justice.

The failure of the jury to retire inmediately to deliberate on their verdict was regarded as significant. It was thought that they would give the evidence long consideration.

Specialtion was keen as to the outcome of the tital. There were those who insiste that the jury's mind had been made up ten minutes after the case began, and equally as many others who believed that it would take several hours or half a day to decide the guilt or innocence of the Strothers.
